2017 IMPACT REPORT
PCMA Education Foundation

WE ARE WAYMAKERS

We open doors and break barriers. We turn inspiration into action; possibilities into opportunities. For today’s innovators and tomorrow’s up and coming talent, we super-empower by example. As we make new ways, people grow and the business events industry advances.
At the Education Foundation of the Professional Convention Management Association, we’re committed to advancing the business events industry and empowering individuals to grow into their professional potential.

We are waymakers through our donors, sponsors and volunteers. Because by donating to the Foundation, you make a new way for the industry.

In 2017, we super-empowered our community with $493,000 in direct funding for scholarships, educational grants, and charitable outreach.

From all of us at the Foundation, thank you.

Travis Russell is ready for anything. After graduating college last April, he snubbed his comfort zone to move across country for his first full-time job in the industry, even though it wasn’t a role he’d envisioned for himself. Why, then? Because, he says, “You have to do what scares you. If you really want to evolve professionally and as a person, you have to take risks.”

Something ventured, something gained: Today, Travis is building on his bachelor’s degree in business administration, hospitality (hons), as he experiences the benefits of being trained and mentored in a sales-focused role, one he’s surprised how much he likes. For now he’s amped on the journey itself, and taking every opportunity to learn new facets of the industry. “I’m motivated by change and challenge,” he shares. “I love that it’s never the same job from one day to the next.”

With this outlook, Travis is a perfect fit for the industry—and he’s in good company. It was the Greek philosopher Heraclitus who said, “No man ever steps in the same river twice, for it’s not the same river and he’s not the same man.”

Though his ultimate career goal is yet undefined, Travis is pursuing an MBA and exploring upstream with an optimized attitude.

Get to know him here, and if your paths cross someday, you might ask him, “How’s the water?”

Why did you pursue the hospitality field?
When I was thinking, “What do I want to do when I wake up every day?” I decided to pursue a field that values my strengths and also challenges me. I’ve been passionate about travel my entire life, and I love the idea that my contribution can make someone’s travel experience outstanding.

Who has been a waymaker for you?
Janet Jakobsen, PCMA Foundation’s Educator Lifetime Achievement Award winner, who was also the first female Canadian honoree, was one of my college professors. She introduced me to PCMA and brought the scholarship to my attention. She showed me how to maximize the conference experience; how to network and the importance of volunteering. Her support made a big impact on me.

A big part of my current job involves being mentored and coached. They’re investing in developing me. That’s a great feeling, a confidence boost, and also a motivator to prove them right.

What advice would you give to someone else starting out in this field?
Keep with it! Take on challenges and seek opportunities to do new things. Just take the bull by the horns and go for it! You may not end up where you originally planned, but you’ll be pleasantly surprised.

Professional Motto: Do what scares you. Take risks. Go all in. I made a decision to move cross country to accept my current job. It was a major life change, but I’m glad I did it. There’s way more to lose if you don’t take risks.

Professional Super Power: Connecting with people. I’m able to gauge and understand situations and behave and proceed accordingly. To succeed at my job and in this field, you have to connect with people first.

Inspiration: People who are passionate, who love what they do and are really good at it. You can see their excitement. That inspires, motivates, and teaches me.
Starlethah Gaddis has reached the upper echelons of the business event planning field, and it only takes a few seconds in her presence to discover why: She’s a positive force who has no fear of changing the game. In fact, Starlethah thrives on change. She says, “To grow, we need to change.”

Starlethah’s career path testifies to this. It all began in unexpected territory—studying sociology. Combining her understanding of what motivates people with a love of learning, she transformed her career path into a superhighway where she soaks up every new opportunity to learn and grow. She was first introduced to the industry fresh out of college as a program coordinator at the American Psychological Association. Starlethah then went on to become the meetings coordinator for the National Association of Elementary School Principals, where she discovered a passion for managing adult learning and educational content. That passion led to her current role, which she’s rocked since January 2017.

Starlethah shared her story with us as we explored what makes a scholarship-winning “Corporate Business Event Professional.” If you’re looking for inspiration—or even a boost of positive energy—to help you get through a crazy day, read on. You might just learn to shapeshift, too.

What do you love about this industry and your job?
Our industry is ever-changing and I absolutely love that aspect. I love walking into an event hall when it’s completely empty and then seeing it come to life, layer by layer, as we set up and the event unfolds.

What’s the most significant change you’ve witnessed in your career?
We’re moving away from traditional conferences with “talking head” speakers toward highly interactive experiences. This is great news, because people learn better when they’re engaged!

What’s the biggest challenge you face?
Many budgets are static or shrinking. So we’re exploring how to deliver training to those who aren’t able to travel by using distance learning innovation and technology.

What are the biggest challenges or opportunities for the industry?
I’d say we need to drive a “mind-shift” change around the perception of our role as simply party planners. If attendees feel like they’ve been at a party where they also learned something valuable, we’ve done our jobs well. But getting there involves many skillsets, such as finance, marketing communications, program management, technology efficiencies, and more.

Who has been a waymaker for you?
Amanda Rushing was the director of meetings and my supervisor at the National Association of Elementary School Principals. She invited me to participate in educational conferences and webinars with PCMA. She also introduced me to the CMP designation—one of the highest credentials in our industry, which I hope to achieve in January 2018.

Professional Motto: Be a chameleon! Every day, I embrace change to fill a need or drive my organization forward into new territories of content presentation. This helps me grow within the industry, too.

Event Planning Super Power: Shapeshifter. Especially in difficult situations, sometimes you just must shift your approach because you’re dealing with such a wide variety of personalities and not everyone is motivated the same way or understands the big picture.

Shout Out: PCMA, for awarding me the scholarship, which included access to the PCMA Business Events Bootcamp. These classes have shed light on so many things I want to learn even more about.

2017 Raffle: Bonjour!

The Ride with the Foundation Raffle took PCMA on a ride to Paris for the Tour de France. At Convening Leaders in January, we announced one lucky winner who won a bucket-list trip to the Tour de France in Paris, including business-class airfare, a five-night stay at the Renaissance Paris Le Parc Trocadero, passes to the Grand Finale, and a Colnago C-60 Italian road bike. Thank you to all who participated!

Missed the Paris trip? This year’s “Ride” will send the winner to Singapore for a Formula 1/Grand Prix Experience. More info foundation.pcma.org/ride.

Naida Struyk is looking back at the most amazing year: She earned her CMP, was chosen for 20 in Their Twenties, and started a new job with the American Bankruptcy Institute. Oh, and she also got married. What’s her super power? Naida spins plates with a smile, and she never gives up.

To understand Naida, consider this: when she wasn’t chosen for 20 in Their Twenties’ inaugural class in 2014, she applied again for 2017. With all this in the rear-view mirror, what’s next for her? She’ll build on her bachelor’s degree in tourism and events management from George Mason University to eventually become an event director, producing large-scale events. In her current role, she’s on a team that produces up to 35 programs a year, ranging from 100 to 1,000 participants.

“I’m passionate about this industry,” she says. “I thrive on the interaction and collaboration... Every event has so many moving parts and people, and that’s what makes it fun.”

Get to know this 20-something honoree. Chances are, we haven’t heard the last from her.

Who has been a waymaker for you?
My mother. She’s worked hard throughout her career to become the vice president of finance for an IT company. She really had to make her own way, and she’s always encouraged me to advocate for myself. She taught me that you can be strong in your ideas and also act with kindness and integrity. She’s a living example of how to “be” and I carry that with me in my own career.

Professional Motto: Work hard. Be kind. I think it’s important to do both, in every situation. You treat the banquet staff the same way you treat the manager of the property.

Event Planning Super Power: Customer service with a smile. I always have a positive attitude, and this helps me thrive in high-pressure situations.

Best Advice Ever Received: Keep pushing forward. My “waymaker” mother instilled in me a sense that I could do or be anything. If I don’t achieve my goal initially, I may just need more experience or education. But I don’t give up.

What do you love about this industry?
It’s great to be a young person here! There aren’t many job sectors where your ideas are really sought after when you’re “green” in the field. Many in the events industry are trying to draw younger generations to their meetings, so it makes sense to have young people at the table.

What does it mean to you to receive the 20 in Their Twenties honor?
It means the world to me. Being recognized gives me more confidence to speak up and trust that my contribution and perspective is valuable.

What advice would you give to someone else starting out in this field?
Join PCMA! It’s unparalleled.

What are the biggest challenges you face as a young person in this field?
So many associations have great tenure, and this means I’m almost always working with people older than I am. It can be intimidating to be on a team with people who have decades of experience. But I know it’s important my voice is heard, especially when we’re trying to address the unique expectations of millennials.

Over 1,000 attendees gathered for the Visionary Awards to honor the exceptional stars of the business events industry. The Oscars-inspired red-carpet experience, awards show and see-and-be-seen after-party make it the industry’s most coveted event.

Party with a Purpose is half dance party, half networking event—and 100% purposeful. Since the first PWAP in 1994, the event has raised over $2.5 million in charitable donations for the Education Foundation, PCMA’s Giving Good and local charities.
2017 GRANTS
$213,000 TO SUPPORT EDUCATIONAL INITIATIVES
The Foundation is proud to fund leading-edge educational programs

RESEARCH FINDINGS AND EDUCATION
The Foundation is proud to provide grants for leading-edge research and education programs that help events professionals make informed decisions and elevate the experiences they provide attendees. Here is a snapshot from our 2017 activities.

“Weaponization of Travel” Study, in collaboration with Destinations International

26% cite discrimination as among the issues that justify travel boycotts.

3 in 4 agree that travel boycotts hurt businesses, especially the hospitality industry.

42% say travel boycotts are effective; 44% say they are not effective.

Dialog and Donation are the most supported alternatives to travel boycotts.

“Planning for the Meetings of Tomorrow: The Present & Future of Technology in Business Events” Study

84% say meeting attendees find out about their meetings and events through traditional email.

Within the next 3 years, 67% plan to use remote participation tools, and 39% say they’ll use virtual or augmented reality.

70% anticipate using artificial intelligence technology to automate marketing or promotion activities.

“The Evolving Role of Business Events Strategists at Corporations and Associations” Study

97% of corporate leaders agree to strongly agree that events strategists are valued overall and seen as helping to further the organization’s goals.

51.4% of event strategists work in the marketing department.

Aligning with high seniority, 47.7% of event professionals are directors.

53.3% of event strategists have CMP credentials.

This guy thinks he can change the world. And he is. Phillip Jones is equal parts waymaker and changemaker, a high-energy, natural leader who is genuinely—yes, delightfully—“geeked out” to guide an organization he sees as a positive force. An avid distance runner and cyclist, Phillip leads with a long-haul outlook. “I envision the Foundation continuing to grow as a force in our industry by giving good, through new ideas, hard work, and loving what we do.”

That last thing—the love thing—is what makes him tick.
Passion with purpose is key, Phillip says. “You have to love what you do.”

Though love is hard to measure, dollars can be counted. Throughout 2017, Phillip inspired his core team and thousands of volunteers to make it a record-breaking year, raising $1.85 million toward cutting-edge research and scholarships to fulfill the dreams of individuals and groups who will shape the future.

“I’m always seeking new opportunities to fundraise in creative and innovative ways,” he says. “One of our big initiatives is the ‘Ride for the Foundation’ raffle. Our goal was to raise $100,000, and it looks like we’ll make it.”

Phillip leads his team by example, and this takes many forms—like never asking anyone to take a polar plunge or go on a fun run without him. For sure, if you’re on his team or in his vicinity, you’ll be inspired.

What do you love about this industry?
This is such a diverse and dynamic community of leaders, and we have fun doing our jobs. Just as important, we have a tremendous impact on local and state economies. This industry gives so much back to the communities where we operate.

Why did you pursue a job in this industry?
Growing up, I lived in Norway, Holland, and Trinidad and Tobago. These experiences opened my eyes to what travel was all about.

Who has been a waymaker for you?
I give credit to Deborah Sexton, President and CEO of PCMA and our Foundation. She invited me to get involved in PCMA, and has been a true ally and an active resource for me. I also give credit to Meredith Rollins, our Executive Director, for elevating our level of professionalism. You can see these waymakers’ impact reflected in the success of our fundraising this year.

Tell us about being a waymaker for others.
In my “day job” as President of VisitDallas, I pride myself on spotting new talent and nurturing them to grow. For example, three people who previously worked for me as heads of sales are today CEOs of Visit Austin, Visit San Antonio, and Visit Anaheim.

What advice would you give to someone coming into this field?
Do what you love and success will follow.

What’s been your sweetest victory?
Achieving record fundraising success in 2017, and overseeing the giving of $493,000 in grants and scholarships.

Professional Moto: No limits. In this industry especially, there’s no limit to where you can go.

Leadership Super Power: My willingness to take on big challenges, to understand and engage in the political arena to support our industry. I’m willing to step up and take a difficult position. The way I see it, no risk, no reward. For example, I fought hard against the bathroom bill in Texas, which would have hurt our economy and industry. And we won.

Inspiration: I’m inspired when I see how positive action can transform lives.

2017 Chair of the PCMA Education Foundation + President & CEO of VisitDallas
Fore! 70 golfers joined the Foundation for the inaugural Foundation Cup in the Chicago area at the exclusive Hinsdale Golf Club.

At the Partnership Summit, members of a select group of sponsors each invite a curated list of clients and special guests for an extended weekend of education and networking. Close to 300 attendees at the 2017 event enjoyed breathtaking natural surroundings at the Hyatt Regency Lake Tahoe Resort, Spa and Casino.

More than 300 participants gave back to the industry—and improved their own fitness—by running a 5K in Austin during Convening Leaders and by spinning at the Education Conference in New York City.

A huge thank you to our generous sponsors for their support of the Partnership Summit. This exclusive education and networking event was held at the beautiful Hyatt Regency Lake Tahoe Resort, Spa and Casino in May. The stunning setting, coupled with executive-level education and unique networking opportunities not only made for an unforgettable event, but forged lasting business connections.

The support and commitment of our sponsors allow the Foundation to raise critical funds that advance the business events industry through innovative research, student and professional scholarships, and thought-provoking educational programming.

Thank You!
